NOTICE.

RULES OF THE HONGKONG SAVINGS' BANK.

- The business of the above Bank will be conducted by the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, on their premises in Hongkong. Business hours on week-days, 10 to 3; Saturdays, 10 to 1.
- The Assets of the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation will form a direct security for the repayment of sums deposited in the above Bank.
- Sums less than $1, or more than $250 at one time will not be received. No depositor may deposit more than $1,500 in any one year.
- Deposits may be on behalf of relations, of trusts, &c., in addition to the depositor's own account.
- Persons desirous of saving sums less than a dollar may do so by affixing clean ten-cent stamps to a form to be obtained at the Bank or at the Post Office. When the form is presented with ten clean stamps the depositor will be credited one dollar.
- Depositors in the Savings Bank having $100 or more at their credit may at their option transfer the same to the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation on fixed deposit for 12 months at 5 per cent. per annum interest.
- Deposits may be forwarded from the Ports by means of clean Hongkong Postage Stamps of any value.
- Interest at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum will be allowed to depositors on their daily balances.
- Each Depositor will be supplied gratis with a Pass-Book which must be presented with each payment or withdrawal. Depositors must not make any entries themselves in their Pass-Books but should send them to be written up at least twice a year, at the beginning of January and beginning of July.
- Covers containing Pass-Books, Registered Letters containing Stamps or other Remittances, and generally, correspondence as to the business of the Bank will, if marked "On Hongkong Savings Bank Business," be forwarded free of Postage or Registration Fees by the various British Post Offices in Hongkong and China.
- Withdrawals may be made on demand, but the personal attendance of the depositor or his duly appointed agent, and the production of his Pass-Book are necessary.
- All documents connected with the business of the Savings Bank are exempt from stamp duty.

We remind our readers of the concert to be given to-morrow evening in the St. Andrew's Hall by M. Savat.

The tug-boat which the Hongkong and Whampoa Dock Company has built at their establishment at Kowloon was successfully launched yesterday, and named the Pilot Fish. She is 106 feet in length between perpendiculars, and her beam is 19 feet. It is calculated that she will be a very powerful vessel.

To-day being the birthday of the Queen of King Humbert of Italy, the men-of-war in port dressed ship in honour of the occasion and at noon a royal salute was fired from the shore battery and the men-of-war representing the nationalities in the harbour. Queen Maria Marguerite Teresa Joanna, who is the daughter of the late Prince Ferdinand of Savoy, and Duke of Genoa, is now thirty-three years of age, having been born on the 20th Nov. 1851. She was married to the King of Italy, then Prince Humbert, on the 22nd April, 1868.

The native papers say the Viceroy of Canton sent a message of condolence to the relations of Gordon, and the flags were all lowered to half-mast when the report that he was killed was received.

A vigorous petition from the graduates and gentry of Foochow is published in the Shanghai native paper Shen-pao, and copied here, setting forth the abominable cowardice and mendacity of Chang and Ho who were the responsible heads of affairs when the disaster at Pagoda Anchorage took place. They actually reported that two French ships had been burnt, but if so, it is naturally asked, where are the remains of them, being made of iron, were not consumed?

The first class-meeting of the lady members of the newly formed Hongkong centre of the St. John Ambulance Association was held in the music room at the City Hall this morning, under the able conduct of Miss Surgeon Turner, R.N.

No less than thirty-one ladies of the community attended the opening meeting of the class, and as this number, we understand from Dr. Turner, is quite as many as can be conveniently accommodated in one class, any further ladies desiring to become members of the Association will be formed into another class which will commence operations in January next. The proceedings of this morning were limited, in accordance with the syllabus of instructions drawn up by the Association for the guidance of the lecturer, to the following:

FIRST LECTURE.
A. Preliminary remarks, object of instruction, &c.
B. General outline of the structure and functions of the Human Body, including a brief description of the Bones, Muscles, Arteries, and Veins. The Functions of the Circulation, Respiration, and of the Nervous System.
C. The triangular bandage, and its application.

The first class for gentlemen members of the Association will take place on Tuesday next at 5.30 p.m. and will be conducted by Dr. Pike, A. M. D.

There is a warlike sound about the name 'St. John Ambulance Association,' which the objects of that institution hardly warrant. Indeed if the training of the members were intended for the battle field only, it is extremely probable the lessons would be thrown away. There is at any rate not much prospect now of Canton being bombarded, or of any wholesale carnage taking place in localities accessible by the members of any benevolent ambulance association in Hongkong. But the Association which has just been established here is intended to meet ordinary and every-day requirements for the succour of injured persons. The objects of the Association are clearly stated in one of its hand-bills:

The St. John Ambulance Association was established in 1877 by the Duke of Manchester and the Viscount of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem (English League) for the purpose of disseminating practical information as to the preliminary treatment of the Sick and Injured among all classes of society.

The needless suffering so frequently caused by the ignorance of unskilled persons is as undoubted as it is deplorable. By rough handling, or even the mere want of the slightest knowledge of how to support an injured limb, a simple fracture may be converted into a compound, or even complicated, fracture. The method of arresting bleeding from an artery is so easy that a child may learn it; yet thousands of lives have been lost, the very life-blood ebbing away in the presence of sorrowing spectators, perfectly helpless because none among them had been taught one of the first rudiments of instruction of an Ambulance pupil—the application of an extemporized tourniquet. Again, how frequent is the loss of life from drowning, yet how few persons, comparatively, understand the way to treat properly the apparently drowned.

Our contemporary sensibly suggests that the police constables here should receive training under the auspices of the Association. Generally in cases of accident the services of a constable are employed; and if by a little instruction his knowledge of how to deal with an injured person can be improved, by all means let such instruction be imparted. The constables themselves would scarcely object to receiving such instruction.

In Lord Malmesbury's 'Recollections' there are several amusing anecdotes of children. This is one of the best—a child being asked what he began was the outward and visible sign, replied: 'The baby.'

People speak about their eyes being fatigued, meaning that the retina, or seeing portion of the brain, is fatigued, but such is not the case, as the retina hardly ever gets tired. The fatigue is in the inner and outer muscles attached to the eyeball, and the muscles of accommodation, which surround the lens of the eye. When a near object is to be looked at, this muscle relaxes and allows the lens to thicken, increasing its refractive power. The inner and outer muscles to which I refer are used in covering the eye on the object to be looked at, the inner one being especially used when a near object is to be looked at. It is in the three muscles mentioned that the fatigue is felt, and relief is secured temporarily by closing the eyes or gazing at far distant objects. The usual indication of strain is a redness of the rim of the eyelid, betokening a congested state of the inner surface, accompanied with some pain. Rest is not the proper remedy for a fatigued eye, but the use of glasses of sufficient power to render unnecessary so much effort to accommodate the eyes to vision. Scientific American.

Opium-smoking is generally denounced as a vice; but notwithstanding all that has been said against it, there are not wanting those among medical authorities who assert that the ill effects of the habit have been, to say the least, greatly exaggerated, and that in certain instances it is absolutely beneficial to health. The question was brought under notice at a recent meeting of the Medical and Board of Guardians. The assistant medical officer presented an inmate of the workhouse infirmary by name John Noakes, who suffered much from neuralgia, had been in the habit of smoking as much as thirty grains of opium. The medical officer's suspicions having been aroused, he intercepted, last week, a parcel of opium, and on searching it, he found it to contain two drachms of opium. This he had refused to give up to Noakes until he left the infirmary. But if Noakes can only assuage the agonies he suffers from neuralgia by opium-smoking, why should he be denied the remedy? St. James's Budget.

A rather unpleasant incident occurred during the passage of the steamer Malabar through the Suez Canal. The vessel had been made fast at one of the stations to allow no fewer than ten ships to proceed on the homeward voyage. Among them was a gunboat flying the French colours and bearing evidence of having had a long and rough time of it, probably on the coast of Madagascar. She was a very dirty, dirty-looking boat, and seemed the most miserable-looking vessel, and seemed the most miserable-looking vessel, and seemed the most miserable-looking vessel. The captain to find on arriving at Suez a cypher telegram from the British Admiral at Port Said, to the effect that the commander of the French gunboat, and his crew, had been taken prisoner by the British. The despatch naturally came as a complete surprise, but in face of the charge, a strict inquiry was ordered, and all the subordinate officers among the sailors and troops were examined as to what their duties were doing at the time of the alleged insult. It was hardly to be said that the investigation proved how utterly groundless was the accusation, and that the treacherous report on the affair signed by several of the naval and military officers on board, completely vindicated the honour of the British blue-jackets.

A correspondent of the N. C. D. News writes:—Sir, While I was writing in my office to-day, seven braves of the Chinese army (I suppose some of those whom you recently referred to as being disbanded in Li Hong-kew) rushed in, and one of them, a filthy-looking coolie, not worthy of the name of a soldier, boldly stretched out his hand and demanded money. I asked him what he wanted for, and he said that one of his worthy comrades had died, and to give him 'military honours,' they wanted some money to buy a coffin for him. I ordered them out of my office; but to my surprise they boldly refused to go, and began parading up and down the office. Things began to look serious, so I took hold of one of the braves and induced him to walk out; but before leaving for good they all stood before the door and used some very abusive language. As soon as they had gone I went along the road and saw them carrying Messrs. Barclay & Co.'s premises; and afterwards I saw one of them coming out with four hundred cash in his hands, and the rest following him. Now, Sir, this kind of annoyance is not at all pleasant, and certainly does not do credit to the Chinese. Before a serious disturbance occurs, to prevent these irregularities from wandering about our streets for cash to maintain their lives—PREVENTION IS BETTER THAN CURE.

THERE is now a case before the Paris civil tribunal, which is unique of its kind, and without any precedent in the books. On the 8th September, a traveller, before taking the train at the Saint-Lazare station, went to dine in one of the numerous restaurants at the Rue de Valenciennes. The traveller's name is M. de Poti-Querly, near Rouen, and his name is Arsène Vidal. He fell to on his system, and in the fourth one he found a pearl of considerable size. He said nothing but quietly detached it from the coat, and instead of taking the train he took to his room and showed the pearl to a friend who lives at No. 82, Avenue Wagram, and who is one of the principal dealers in pearls in Paris. The dealer estimated it at 1,200 francs, and offered that sum for it. M. Vidal pocketed the sum, with the words of a man who has not very frequent opportunities of receiving 248 in a lump. A prudent man would have kept the windfall secret; but M. Vidal is evidently not a prudent man, for he at once drove back to his restaurant, where he had dined, and said to the host: 'I have come to offer you a glass of champagne, M. Degros. I owe you at least that much.' And he told him his simple story. It is here that the situation grows complicated. M. Degros claimed the pearl as his legal property because it stands to reason that when he sells his customers a dozen of oysters for 2 shillings he does not mean to make them a present of 248. M. Vidal requested him to tell that to the market; then both language began to be used, and both parties were taken before the Police Commissary who declared himself incompetent to deal with the matter. Next day the restaurant summoned his two fortunate customers before the civil tribunal. He pleaded that the pearl being adherent to the oyster legally and logically belonged to him, because the customer who cut the oyster on the premises never took the shells away with him. Before M. Vidal's counsel had time to reply a third claimant came forward in the person of Mr. Bresse, a wholesale dealer, who supplies M. Degros with oysters, and argued that the pearl, or the 1,200 francs, should be handed to him as the only legitimate owner. The tribunal has taken time to consider its decision, and no wonder. This is not the first time that pearls have been found in European oysters, though such a find is extremely rare. On the 18th March 1871, the very day on which the insurance of the Communists broke out, M. Soullier, a Paris journalist, found a very fine pearl in a mussel system, in a restaurant, and he was breakfasting. After some discussion with the restaurateur, they sold it for 26 and divided the proceeds. That is evidently what the three claimants of the latest find ought to do, instead of spending 200 or 2100 in law proceedings.

As a termination to the submarine operations which have been going on in the river opposite Fort Matilda on the Clyde by the 27th Company of the Royal Engineers, a number of experiments with gun-cotton were recently made. An old steam launch was moored in the river off the fort at the end of the esplanade, ten feet beneath the surface of the water. Three torpedoes were laid, and the charge was detonated by means of a battery of the fort. This battery consisted of 100 Leclanché cells, the current being conveyed by means of a submarine cable from the testing-room in the fort. The experiment was eminently successful, the launch, which was constructed of iron, being thrown to the height of fifty feet in the air by the tremendous force of the explosion, and was reduced to atoms. Volumes of water were raised, and a commotion was made on the surface for a great distance. The torpedoes were made by Messrs. Tyler and Quill, under whose superintendence the experiment was wrought, are to be congratulated on the success attained. A number of officers connected with the Committee on Fortifications who were inspecting the Clyde defences witnessed the event, and the officer in command remarked that the operation had simply been made to show the manner in which an enemy's warship could be laid across the river to effectually prevent an entrance by invaders.

Prisoner was only charged on three offences, and of course his Lordship would have to take that into consideration in passing sentence. He would have some opportunity of saying anything he might have to say in mitigation of his offence.

Lum Aat was charged with having burglariously entered the Basil Mission House, occupied by the Rev. Rudolph Leclerc, on the night of the 2nd October, and with stealing therefrom one clock, one medicine chest, two umbrellas, and one coat of letters, the property of the Rev. Henry Zeigler. A Chinese teacher living in the Mission House, roused by hearing a noise, examined the house in company with another inmate, and found several of the window panes broken and also discovered the articles mentioned in the charge on the doorstep. In the meantime a Chinese constable had seen the prisoner run out at the gate. He pursued him and Constable MacDougall arrested him. The key of the clock was found in prisoner's possession, and was found guilty. There were two previous convictions against him. Sentence was reserved.

Robbery from the person with violence. Hung Awan was charged with another person unknown with assaulting and robbing a Chinese hawk, first returned from Singapore, of a purse and waistband, a silver watch, one dollar, five ten-cent pieces, and a rupee, on the 13th October. Complainant's statement was that as he was returning along the Praya near the Harbour Master's Office, he was overtaken by the evening, the prisoner came up in front of him, while another man seized him by the throat from behind, and cut away his purse. There were other people there at the time, but they took no notice of the assault. The two men were then taken to the police station, and the prisoner was charged with the robbery of robbery with violence. Sentence reserved.

DR. E. J. EITEL.

CROWN OCTAVO, PP. 1018.

HONGKONG, 1877-1883.
Part I. A-K. ... $2.50
Part II. K-M. ... $2.50
Part III. M-P. ... $3.00
Part IV. P-Y. ... $3.00A Reduction of ten per cent. will be allowed to purchasers of Ten or more copies.This Standard Work on the Chinese Language, constructed on the basis of Kangxi's Imperial Dictionary, contains all Chinese characters in practical use, and while phre-netically arranged according to the sounds of the oldest dialect of China, the Cantone, it gives also the Mandarin pronunciation of all characters explained in the book, so that its usefulness is by no means confined to the Cantonese Dialect, but the work is a practically complete Thesaurus of the whole Written Language of China, ancient and modern, as used all over the Empire, whilst its introductory chapters serve the purpose of a philological guide to the student.A Supplement, arranged for being bound and used by itself, and containing a List of the Radicals, an Index, and a List of Surnames, will be published and sold separately.
